Young Vision for BHARAT

“I dream of a young India that is not constrained by any limitations whatsoever. I want the youth of this country to lead a life filled with hope and opportunity” quoted our prime Minister, Narendra Modi.

This forever reminds me of the power of youth and how they can bring change to this beloved country.

The youth is believed to be the change-maker, assets to the country: and their visions are believed to bring Revolutions.

From accepting and respecting cultural norms to breaking stereotypes, the youth of this Nation has been setting benchmarks and giving wings to the vision of India that the past has dreamt of.

Where at one end the youth has been seen misusing the law and order, creating chaos, putting up a dark front for the world to see as a nation of controversy; which seems quite demoralizing as where is this youth going walking in the wrong direction.

The light at the end of tunnel is shining brighter than ever before.

Bending rules, breaking stereotypes ‘guys can wear makeup and dominate the world cosmetic industry’ and ‘girls could choose their life path as their own wish’

The huge celebration of the Pride Month for the LGBTQ community has been a great inspiration for everyone.

All this has been possible only in Young India.

The vision of New India has already been laid out where the youth of our Nation becomes key stakeholders in building the India of the 21st century.

YOUNG VISION OF BHARAT

Youth is the backbone of a Country. Youth can play an important role in building a strong and united India.

Unfortunately, for decades since independence, youth have felt neglected, disillusioned andudderless. Youth in any country form its backbone. It is on youths shoulders that the responsibility for change, process and innovations lies.

It is the youth only who have the necessary courage and initiative to break out the taboos and crippling practices. Mao-tse Tung of China realised this latent power and dedication of the youth of his country.

Again in our own Country our youth played a significant role in the freedom struggle and made considerable sacrifices. Youth is the spring of life. It is the age of discovery.
